Axiom appoints CEO

Run off consultancy Axiom has hired Tim Riddell as its chief executive officer with effect from 1st December 2007. He is currently managing director of Axiom's Financial Reporting Services Team having joined from Argenta Syndicate Management Limited in May 2007.

Dave Jennings, chairman of Axiom explained: "Tim's appointment marks a key step in our development programme. We have enjoyed a strong year to date with good results and significant client wins. We have also taken a number of important steps to restructure our business and in Tim we have secured the ideal CEO to further build on these achievements and lead the business forward." Mr Riddell added: "Axiom is a first class business and well positioned to benefit from developments in the reinsurance and insurance markets. I have had the benefit of seeing the business close up for the last five months. There are a number of opportunities to grow the business and I am very excited about leading Axiom into the future. "I will be working closely with the chairman to develop our plans and look forward to being able to announce in the very near future new and important senior appointments that will further strengthen our team."
